STRAL SUND, Prussia

One of the most memorable operations of the Thirty Years War was the siege of Stralsund.

For 10 weeks, Wallenstein encamped about the city, but was finally obliged to remove his troops and give up the siege.

King Gustavus Adolphus II had ordered construction of the VASA. Intended to carry 300 fighting men and a working crew of 133, it displaced 14,000 tons. Forty acres of timber had gone into its construction.

It was a 180-foot square - rigger and 64 bronze cannons were mounted in its 3 decks.

At 4 PM, the VASA weighed anchor & slid gracefully away. A sudden squall blew up the bay & the ship tilted to PORT. Water poured into the square open gunports of the lower deck. In minutes the sea closed over the VASA. There were few survivors

Albrecht von Wallenstein was a Bohemian noble who had fought on the imperial side in the Bohemian war. He had acquired vast wealth by marriage. He offered to raise a volunteer army under his own command, and that offer Ferdinand accepted. 1628 Wallenstein made his one serious failure before Stralsund which could not be blockaded on the sea side and defied storming on the land side In 1629, this phase of the war ended in the treaty of Lubeck
